

THE FUTURE IS HERS

For trans people to achieve equal rights, we need a cultural shift, featuring Isa Noyola

Isa Noyola, former director of programs at the Transgender Law Center, is deputy director of Mijente, a political, digital, and grassroots hub for Latinx and Chicanx organizing and movement building. This video transcript is part of the Future Is Hers multimedia series, celebrating innovators, risk-takers, and change makers, supported by the Ford Foundation, who have impacted the lives of women and girls around the globe.

Transcript begins.

[on-screen text: Isa Noyola, Director of Programs, Transgender Law Center]

[A Latina with long hair, wearing a flowing patterned dress with a brown scarf, addresses the camera.]

ISA NOYOLA: We're looking for a cultural shift—that we're actually a part of the fabric of everyday communities. We are not just settling for crumbs—that we're not just settling for policy wins and bathroom accommodations. But actually, for everyone to really understand gender and to understand our lives in more complex ways.

[on-screen graphic: Ford Foundation logo]

End of transcript.